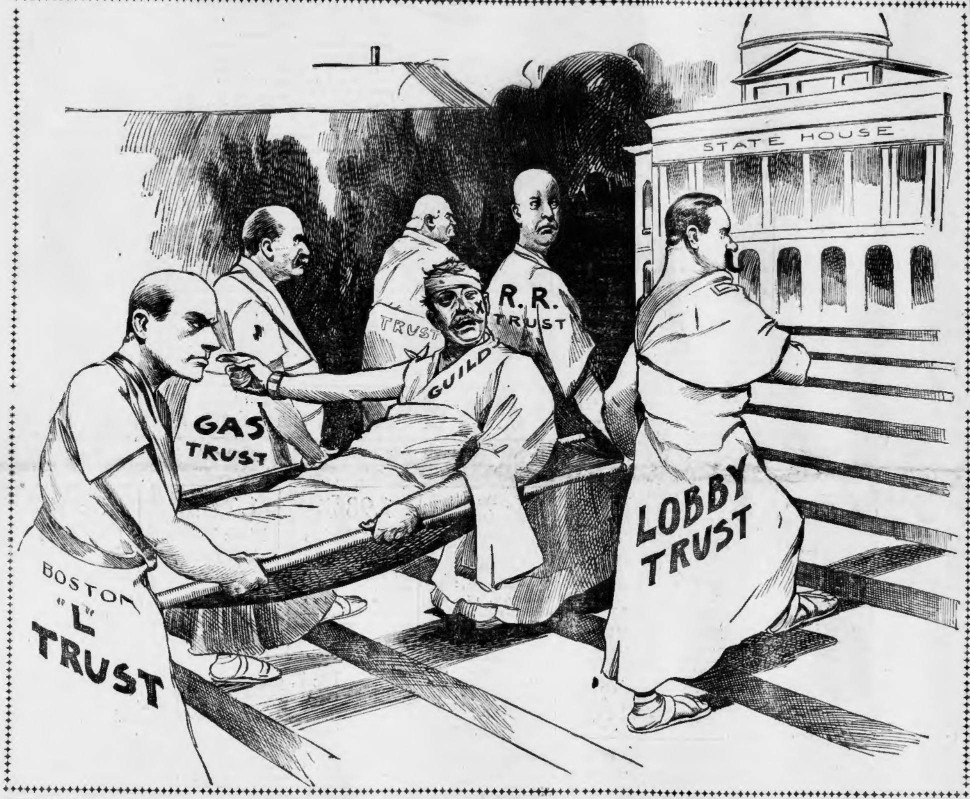
CASTELLANE DIVORCE CASE FORGE CHARGE

GUILD—"THIS IS A VICTORY OVER YELLOW JOURNALISM."



Count Accused of Falsifying Papers to Influence Wife—Amazing Revelations by Letters from French Nobleman to His Wife, Asking Her to Take Him Back.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The charge that forgery had been committed in the interest of Count Boni de Castellane, so that he might influence his wife, who was Anna Gould of New York, was made to-day in the trial for divorce which his distressed and disillusioned Countess has brought against her titled husband.

Documents purporting to bear out this accusation were introduced in the case by Maitre Cruppi, who represents the Countess. The alleged forged documents were to the effect that Edmond Kelly, the American attorney for the Countess, was concerned in a plot to accomplish the political ruin of the Count.

Following this sensational feature of the case came the intimation from the speech of M. Millerand that the creditors intend to try to hold Countess Anna jointly liable with Boni for his enormous debts. The attorney declared that the 1,000,000 francs annual income allotted the Castellanes by the Gould family was not sufficient to meet the household expenses. Hence Boni and Countess Anna jointly got into the hands of usurers.

Both husband and wife signed papers on which money was loaned.

He declared that Countess Anna has recognized the debts, thus making herself responsible for them.

DUELS ARE AVERTED.

Count Boni will probably be saved from the wrath of the indignant husbands whose wives have figured in connection with his case and whose names would be revealed if an open trial were decided upon.

As a result of a secret agreement, it was announced to-day that the case would be decided upon documentary evidence and that the verdict would be announced on Thursday. The names of the numerous women with whom the count corresponded will not come out, it is believed, and the little nobleman will escape a number of threatened duels.

This decision is regarded as a big point in favor of the Countess, who was Miss Anna Gould of New York. She would naturally want to shun a public trial which would spread before the world the domestic skeletons that have been dangling about their castle ever since their marriage.

CREDITORS DEMAND MONEY.

An army of creditors thronged the court house to-day to offer proof of their claims against the prodigal Count, whose personal debts are estimated at $800,000. In view of the vigor which the creditors are pressing their suits it is not to be wondered that Boni wished to preserve his wife as the buffer of their attacks.

Some of the statements made in court by M. Bonnet, Boni's attorney, in regard to the count's financial affairs, have caused a laugh from those acquainted with the facts. M. Bonnet declared that Boni has spent 400,000 francs he inherited from Madame Gailleri and 800,000 francs which he had anticipated receiving from his father, the Marquis de Castellane, on the Trianon, the handsome Paris mansion of the Castellanes.

Just how Boni could spend 800,000 francs, which he anticipated from his father, is the latest wonder of Paris. It is well known that the Marquis de Castellane practically supports himself by writing, and Boni's anticipation of 800,000 francs from him is regarded as a joke.

One statement made by M. Bonnet, however, is believed without question. That is that Boni will be pauperized unless he is allowed suitable alimony in the divorce decree. M. Bonnet insisted that not one of Boni's debts, representing something like an annual expenditure of 5,192,000 francs, is a personal obligation, but that all the money was spent with the countess on houses or art collections which they enjoyed equally. He said the countess even encouraged Boni in these expenditures. The Trianon, M. Bonnet said, had proved a bottomless pit for the sinking of Countess Anna's American dollars.

"UNDYING AFFECTION."

Boni's appeals for a reconciliation continued up to the very moment of the closing of the hearing. In summing up his address M. Bonnet made a final plea, saying:

"I have a mission to-day to bring the Countess the assurance of the undying affection of her unhappy husband."

In outlining Boni's demands M. Bonnet stated that the count is willing for the children to remain with their mother, except that they are to spend a part, at least, of all holidays with him and are to visit his parents on Thursday and Sunday afternoons. Neither are the children to be taken to America without his permission, as in no other way can Boni be assured that they will be reared according to French ideas. Boni fears that the countess may want to keep them in the United States in view of her statement that she is miserable in France and has never felt at home here.

Cruppi Makes Reply.

Maitre Cruppi, for the Countess, in reply, charged the Count's lawyer with seeking to divert attention from the issue at the bar by making an unprecedented and baseless attack on Mr. Kelly, who, counsel declared, enjoyed a standing in the United States and France which made his defence superfluous, he being a member of the New York bar and counsel for the United States legation in Paris for the past twenty years.

Maitre Cruppi read a letter from Mr. Kelly denying the charges made against him, and saying that until the names of the persons mentioned were introduced by counsel for the Count he had never heard of those he was supposed to have bribed.

Maitre Cruppi then produced what he declared to be forged documents by which, counsel charged, the Count in July last attempted to convince his wife that Mr. Kelly was concerned in a plot to accomplish his political ruin.

At the conclusion of the pleadings the case was adjourned for a week.

Prospects of duels between lawyers for both sides, and the fact that Countess Anna now has the bitter enmity of the fashionable Faubourg St. Germain for the way she

CHARGE FORGERY IN FIGHT IN CURLEY WARD

OPPOSITION DECLARES NAME WAS ADDED TO NOMINATION PAPERS AFTER FILING.

Charges of forgery in the nomination papers of the Ward 17 Ward Committee were made before the members of the Ballot Law Commission, consisting of the four members of the Board of Election Commissioners and Chief Justice Bolster of the Municipal Court, to-day by opponents of the Tammany Club, of which Alderman James Curley and Senator-elect Thomas F. Curley are the leading spirits.

It was charged by Representative Theodore Glynn and John J. Mansfield that, after the paper had been legally filed with the Democratic City Committee, a forged name was added in order that the nomination paper might by invalidated by having too many names upon it. The fact was discovered by the members of the Board of Election Commissioners, who asked for the hearing. Sixteen names are allowed by law. There were seventeen on the paper in question.

John J. Keller, a Dudley street grocer, whose home is at No. 23 Clifton street, looked at his name on the paper and declared that not only had he not signed it, but he had never seen the paper before.

T. F. Curley Behind Rail.

Mr. Mansfield, acting as attorney for the Curley opposition, declared that the forgery had been committed after the papers had been filed at the rooms of the Democratic city committee.

"I will show that Thomas F. Curley has been seen frequently behind the rail since the papers were filed. As he heads the other ticket he is naturally the most interested."

Attorney Mansfield declared that at meetings in Ward 17 on Saturday and Sunday last, Thomas F. Curley proclaimed that the opposition papers had been irregularly filed. This was the first intimation that Glynn and his followers had that there was anything the matter with the papers.

Representative Glynn told of filing the papers and also seeing them at the time of the substitution of names for withdrawals. At that time they were in the same condition as when filed and Keller's name was not on the papers. Similar evidence was given by ex-Councilman John P. Lanergan and by Councilman Thomas F. Phelan of Ward 17.

Not Opposed by Curleys.

No one appeared to oppose the allegations. The Ballot Law Commission took the matter under advisement.

Daniel F. O'Connell of Ward 20 and Thomas F. Campbell of Ward 24, jointly requested that the ward committee tickets, headed by them, be given first position on the ballots. This is the result of Assistant Secretary McGovern of the Democratic City Committee filing opposition papers from a position behind the rail of the committee rooms. The hearing was postponed.

FIRE FOLLOWS TROLLEY CRASH

In a head-on collision between two electric cars on Oakland street, near River street, Mattapan, to-day, Motorman Philip Fay of the inward bound car was badly cut over the right eye by flying glass.

There were no passengers on either car. The inward bound car was set afire by the concussion, but the flames were quickly extinguished by members of Engine Company No. 19, who were nearby. Motorman James Kenney was running the outward bound car.

MORAN BACK TO-MORROW

District Attorney Moran, who has been taking a two-day rest at Lakewood, N. J., will roll up his desk at the county court house in Pemberton square to-morrow and again get down to the business of the office. His assistants were all at work during Mr. Moran's snappy two weeks' campaign for the governorship, and it cannot be said that the work is piled up, but Mr. Moran will still find things to do.

BARNES WILL FIGHT IN COURT

Arguments were made to-day at East Cambridge, and the contested will of Mrs. Louisa Pierce Barnes of Newton is now in the hands of Judge Lawton of the Probate Court for Middlesex County.

When the testator was seventy-six years old she married Dr. Charles Hall Barnes, now of California, who was then not thirty. A first will left her all to the young doctor. By a second will everything was divided between two nieces.

The estate is valued at not more than $10,000, according to report, and creditors, alleging that there is not more than enough to satisfy their claims, make the contest. Dr. Barnes has not appeared.

CAUSED UPROAR IN COURT.

The charges of Maitre Bonnet against Lawyer Kelley will be investigated by the court. Bonnet's words caused an uproar in the court, and the gendarmes were called in to compel silence.

Further revelations as to the manners and morals of French aristocratic society amused the large audience that gathered for the second day's hearing of the suit. Neither the Countess nor the Count was present.

Maitre Cruppi, of counsel for the Countess, in resuming the presentation of her case, briefly reviewed the points he had covered last week, referring to the reckless fashion in which the Count had spent millions of the Countess's money while allowing her only a niggardly few hundred francs monthly for pin-money, on one occasion brutally refusing to increase her allowance to $200 a month.

Counsel declared that the proofs of the Count's infidelity and cruelty, contained in the thirteen allegations made last week, were sufficient to justify a divorce without summoning witnesses.

COUNT WANTED PARDON.

Maitre Cruppi then plunged directly into the count's maneuvres since the divorce proceedings were instituted to reconquer his wife's affections, sarcastically emphasizing the count's persistency even until a few weeks ago in persecuting the countess with appeals for pardon. Cruppi read the following letter from the count to his wife, dated February 16:

"Recent events have completely overwhelmed me. I am so grief-stricken that I cannot express the terrible sufferings I have endured. I am like a wreck, driven hither and thither by the wind and waves. My thoughts remain always with you, notwithstanding all.

"Forgive me if I have offended you. I do not believe myself guilty of all they have accused me of to you.

"If I die soon, and I hope I will, pray keep a little corner of your soul for me. I have loved you so much."

CALLS IN HIS DISTRESS.

Another letter, dated February 18, follows:

"My sorrow becomes greater every day. You were generous yesterday and I was profoundly touched then. From the depths of my heart I call to you in my distress.

"You are my only love, and it will kill me. (Signed) BONI".

"If I have wronged you I beg your pardon; if I have pained you I repent. (Signed) "BONI."

The acknowledgement of his wife's generosity referred to the fact that Anna provided Boni with money to assist him in his election to the Chamber of Deputies. Cruppi scathingly commented on the fact that Boni in all his letters admitted doing wrong while craving forgiveness.

Boni wrote passionate letters; they all breathed repentance, but he protested against shouldering all the accusations against him.

Boni often swore that he would rather die than live without her. The Countess, from the day she left her husband, after the dinner, given to the King and Queen of Portugal, seeking refuge with Mrs. Drake, remained firm in her determination not to communicate with her errant husband.

Finally the Countess wrote to the Count on March 28:

"Do not trouble to write to me again. I shall not read your letters.

"Since my marriage you have always acted wrongly toward me. You have always caused me pain and suffering. Now that I no longer love you, for I have lost all confidence in you, nothing remains for us to do but bid each other good-bye forever.

"I have lost all patience with you and now dare to speak the truth. YOU DISGUST ME.
(Signed) "ANNA."

POETICALLY PASSIONATE.

When Boni received this ultimatum he changed his tone and accused Anna of hypocrisy. On July 20 Boni became poetically passionate again, and, believing there was a hope of reconciliation, wrote as follows:

"I have examined my conscience and find at the bottom that you are all I have ever wished, willed, or desired. You, dear Anna, you alone, with your childlike simplicity, and touching sincerity.

"I remember how you came to me, bringing your heart and your fortune, disposed to love and serve me. No other woman has ever held a place in my life that you have occupied. My heart has been wrung, my emotions tortured by my ardent nature.

"I may have committed grave faults, but have always regretted them. I implore pardon and pray you will let me see you once again. Despite your unexampled cruelty my whole heart is with you. My darling wife remains always in my heart and my imagination.

"DO NOT LET ME DIE ALONE LIKE AN ABANDONED DOG.
"(Signed) "BONI."

The audience shrieked with merriment when Cruppi read this letter.

In September the countess, tired of Boni's passionate but insincere pleadings for pardon, protestations of love and promises of reform, shocked the count's delicate soul by sending him three postal cards which the postmen and servants might read. One of them read:

"My response is the refusal of a respectable woman to see such a libertine."

The wording of the other postal cards was equally emphatic, one reading:

"Do not think I am so stupid as Madame X. imagines."

The last postal card was signed:

"With my profound scorn."

Nothing daunted by these public rebuffs, the Count wrote in reply:

"Oh, take me back; let us take each other back. I have always loved you. I love you still. Let us be together again—be everything to each other.
(Signed) "BONI."

No debasement was too great for the Count to subject himself to while passionately pleading for forgiveness. He grovelled in the dust, so abject were his expressions of humiliation. But the Countess remained adamant to even such fervidness as "I am mad with love for you. I want to hold you in my arms, heart to heart."

Another letter, filled with poetic gush about the perfume and flowers, the tenderness and dawn, cloying kisses, et cetera, concluded:

"Am I Dead to You?"

My Poor Anna—Am I then indeed dead to you? I have been eight months without a sign from you. If you have suffered like me you would have been dead long ago. Shall I never see you again? Will you refuse to hear my voice again?

You must see me before I die. I must make confession to you. For the sake of our children please see me. Do see me. Dear Anna, see what you have done with your wretched disposition. BONI.

The Countess's disposition did not change, for she did not answer this letter, and again the Count wrote:

Do your great, dark eyes hold no pity for me; can you contemplate my death unflinchingly?

I implore you, promise me if ever I am in danger you'll come to me and will not let me die alone like a dog by the wayside. BONI.

In one of her letters to the Count, Anna wrote:

Do not waste words. You have always behaved badly. I have suffered much and have no more affection for you; no more confidence, no more patience. You are loathsome to me henceforth.

This contemptuous answer was written in reply to a pleading letter from her "noble" husband, who had written to her:

If I have done wrong is there no pardon? Will nothing touch your heart? I swear I have repented. Think of our children. I do not attempt to exculpate myself. But the world is very wicked and will talk. For God's sake, for our children's sake, for your own sake, relent. I am punished now as never was a sinner before.

The Count wrote the first of his unwilling epistles on February 27. It reads:

My grief increases from day to day. You have been too generous. I feel sorrow so deep. I certainly shall die. But your absence, this alienation, is better than death. I love you, so that when I am away from you I long to die. Oh! to kiss your lips, to be with you in a spirit of love and of remorse! My contrition consumes me.

As if inspired by the anger of a husband greatly misunderstood, the wifebeating nobleman wrote a little later:

If you have endured pain, so have I. But you go on like a fool; you are carried away by hatred. I am not guilty of one-fifth of what you charge against me.

Soon he wrote again in the tenderest vein:

I swear I never loved but you. Come to me, take me back. Let us begin again; let me only kiss you again. Forgive me, pardon! pardon!

And again:

"Cannot Live Without You."

My dear, dear Anna, in spirit I clasp you in my arms, eyes to eyes, lips to lips. While weighty tears course my wet cheeks, I confess that I, a wretch, have caused you pain. I love you with a raging love, I cannot live without you. No one who can displease you will ever be near us. My love is infinite and pure. Oh! to see you; to embrace you while I shed repentant tears!

"The Countess's feelings were outraged by his letters, by his selfish, scheming sentiments expressed in full heroics borrowed from the opera," cried Maitre Cruppi, while fashionables who crowded the courtroom exchanged smiles.

In a letter the Count wrote after he was re-elected to the Chamber of Deputies he thanks his wife for "her support," adding:

When I review the four years that have passed with you I am infinitely touched by your goodness. You have helped me with your love and with your fortune. I would rather have suffered a thousand deaths than hurt you, but from boyhood I have had a fiery temperament which I have fought all my life. I think wistfully of your sweet, childlike ingenuousness, of your great black eyes. I feel that I shall die soon. Grant me one supreme favor; give me your woman's pity, and if I come to the last extremity let me not die like a dog, unwept, alone.

Boni Makes Reply.

After recess Maitre Bonnet, of counsel for Count Boni, commenced his reply by describing the dreams of luxury of a young American heiress when she married a French nobleman, resulting in making the life of extravagance upon which she entered quite natural to her.

Counsel then read affectionate letters written by the Countess to the Count excusing her inability to furnish funds, because her brother, George Gould, would not supply them. To show that the Count made sacrifices as well as his wife, Maitre Bonnet declared that he sold his share of the ancestral Forest of Bueny in order to make the first payment, $80,000, on the Malakoff avenue property. The divorce proceedings, counsel said, were due to the evil counsel of the mischief-makers, especially to the machinations of Edmond Kelly, the American lawyer, whose object was to obtain a big fee. Without adverse influences counsel was sure the Countess would return to her husband.

LAWYER URGES SAVINGS BANK INSURANCE

Louis D. Brandeis Says Industrial Companies Make Too Much Money.

A system of savings bank insurance for Massachusetts was advocated by Louis D. Brandeis at the State House to-day in an elaborate exposition before the special legislative "recess" Committee on Insurance. Mr. Brandeis went deeply into the question of industrial insurance in Massachusetts. He maintains that the industrial companies have been taking too much money out of the State for the protection that they give. Some of them he arraigned for their methods, their commissions to agents and other alleged defects.

"In the past fifteen years," said Mr. Brandeis, "the workingmen of the Commonwealth have paid to these industrial companies over $61,000,000 in premiums. They received in policies terminated by death a little over $21,000,000, and there has been accumulated as a 'reserve' by the companies less than $10,000,000, showing that over $30,000,000, or half of the total amount paid to the companies by Massachusetts workingmen, has been taken by the companies for the payment of expenses and for dividends.

"If this $61,000,000 had been placed in Massachusetts savings banks, and if there had been withdrawn the amounts that have been paid back by these insurance companies, there would still be in the banks for these workingmen within a few dollars of $50,000,000, whereas there is really left less than $10,000,000, and this belongs to the companies. And the State, meanwhile, would have received $600,000 more than it has had in savings bank taxes."

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Costs Nothing To Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

"I TIED HIS SHOES; HOW COULD HE DESERT ME!" CRIES GIRL

"TRICKED" SHE DECLARES BY BOGUS WEDDING

Bessie Cohen Tells Pathetic Story of Devotion to Man She Accuses.

ONLY WANTS HIS LOVE

While tears streamed down her pretty face, Miss Bessie Cohen, who thought for more than a year that she was the wife of Emanuel Goldsmith, told a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day a pathetic story supporting her suit against Goldsmith for $25,000 for breach of promise. She asserts that she was tricked into believing that their marriage was legal.

"I used to tie his shoes for him in the morning and bathe his feet in the evening when he said that they ached," said the distressed girl between her sobs. "I never thought he would treat me in this cruel way."

His Property Attached.

Goldsmith is a prominent young business man of this city and was formerly in the cigar business. He has considerable property and a bank account, both of which have been attached in the suit that has been brought. He has disappeared from his usual haunts in this city, and it is believed that he is now in New York.

Miss Cohen was seen at No. 87 Myrtle street, where she had lived as Mrs. Goldsmith. She is twenty-three years of age and a brunette. This is her story:

"I met Mr. Goldsmith four years ago at my father's house and I thought him an honest, upright man. He was so good to me at first that I cared a great deal for him. During the four years of our acquaintance he scolded me at times, but I overlooked it, thinking that his business troubled him. Although he had a number of relatives in Boston, he never took me to see them. I asked him why and he said that he was not on speaking terms with them.

"In June, 1904, he asked me to marry him and I consented. On June 13 he told me that he knew a justice of the peace and that we would be married there. We went there in the evening. It was somewhere off Tremont street, near Dartmouth. We were married, as I supposed, and we went to live on Myrtle street.

Sister Warned Her.

"I was advised by my sister, Mrs. Anna Goldberg, not to marry him, but I am a cripple and have worked hard all my life, and I thought that he would take care of me."

At this point Miss Cohen burst into tears and sobbed bitterly for several minutes.

"During the first week," she continued, "he began to ill-treat me. I have done things for that man that no other woman would ever do for one. I used to tie his shoes for him in the morning and bathe his feet for him at night when he said they were aching.

"Last September I went to New York to attend the marriage of my sister. When I returned he had his trunks packed and told me that he was going away. It was then that he first told me that we were not married. He left me and I have not seen him since.

"I loved him and all I wanted him to do was to love me in return. I wish I could die and end all these troubles. Now I have got to work again for a living and I am hardly able to do so as my eyesight is poor and I am otherwise unfit for work.

"I never thought that he would treat me so after I had been so good to him for so long."

CHARITY CLUB BAZAR TO-NIGHT

The members of the Charity Club will open to-night at the Vendome their unique bazaar, "The Tambola," for which they have been making elaborate preparations for many weeks.

The bazar will have Japanese features throughout, and the booths will be decked with Oriental splendor. Among guests expected to-night are Governor Guild and ex-Governors Bates and Long.

Mrs. John F. Wood has charge of the book table. Mrs. T. H. Ames has charge of the tea tables, and she will be assisted by pretty girls daintily dressed in white. Mrs. Frank D. Ellison has supervision of an amusement booth for children, and Mrs. Edgar Young and the Junior Club have the candy and flower table.

BESSIE COHEN, PLAINTIFF IN $25,000 SUIT.

CLAIM WHOLE LEAGUE TICKET BUT HEARST

INDEPENDENT MANAGERS SAY CHANLER AND ASSOCIATES ELECTED IN NEW YORK.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Returns from fourteen up-State counties still incomplete indicate the election of the entire Independence League State ticket with the exception of W. R. Hearst. It seems likely now that Hughes will have over Hearst in the State a plurality of 53,000 to 57,000.

The vote for Chanler over Bruce on the returns at hand indicates a plurality of less than 3,000. As Bruce ran in some places up the State ahead of Hughes, these Chanler figures may be reduced so that Bruce will pull through by a margin of a few hundred votes.

Chanler's plurality below the Harlem is 134,940. If the missing districts still to be heard from give a vote for Bruce equalling that of Hughes in the State, Chanler may be defeated.

It is believed that the remainder of the Independence State ticket has pulled through safely by small pluralities.

There are given herewith the figures printed in the New York newspapers to-day so that the reader may see for himself how the men who collect the returns and edit the newspapers differ as to the result.

Newspaper Figures.

THE WORLD—Hughes over Hearst, 61,088; Bruce over Chanler, 1,000; Jackson over Mayer, 5,000; Whalen over O'Brien, 5,000; Skene over Van Alstyne, 5,000; Glynn over Lewis, 5,000; Hauser over Wallenmeyer, 5,000.

THE SUN—Hughes over Hearst, 60,900; Chanler over Bruce, 3,704; Whalen over O'Brien, 8,864; Jackson over Mayer, 9,059; Hauser over Wallenmeyer, 15,283; Glynn over Lewis, 4,394; Skene over Van Alstyne, 12,308.

HERALD—Hughes over Hearst, 58,000; Chanler over Bruce, 3,876; Whalen over O'Brien, 3,532; Hauser over Wallenmeyer, 6,187; Jackson over Mayer, 6,942; Skene over Van Alstyne, 8,261; Glynn over Lewis, 6,739.

THE TRIBUNE: Hughes over Hearst—59,694. Bruce over Chanler—4,000. Mayer over Jackson—4,000. O'Brien over Whalen—4,000. Lewis over Glynn—4,000. Wallenmyer over Hauser—4,000. Skene over Van Alstyne—7,000.

The Legislature will be Republican by a heavy majority in both branches, the Senate standing thirty-one Republicans and twenty Democrats and the Assembly 103 Republicans, forty-five Democrats, one Independence League and one in doubt.

The congressional representation from Greater New York remains unchanged.

Notwithstanding the failure to count the votes, and the bribery and repeating that was predicted, the Republicans were unable to prevent a tremendous reduction of their plurality of two years ago.

Plots of the Plunderbund.

In Greater New York the election disclosed the fact that every device that could be resorted to by the agents of the Plunderbund was employed to cut down the vote of Mr. Hearst. Whereas, in the rural districts thousands of votes cast under the scales were either ignored or counted as straight Democrat votes, or put in envelopes marked "void" or "protested," preventing any declaration in many counties as to the exact number of Independence League ballots cast for Mr. Hearst, in Greater New York there has been a series of organized plots to make the Hearst vote as small as possible.

WOULD-BE SLAYER OF ROOSEVELT IN PANAMA

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—A Panama special to the New York Herald says Jerman Kehl, who in 1903 tried to gain admission to the White House with the declared view of killing Mr. Roosevelt, arrived in Panama yesterday from Chile and was put under arrest. Physicians declared him insane. He will be sent back to Chile.

There are a number of secret service men now on the Isthmus to look after the safety of Mr. Roosevelt. For weeks the canal zone police and detectives have kept close watch on all arrivals at ports between Panama and Colon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Theodore Roosevelt, breaker of precedents, starts late this afternoon on the trip that will constitute the breaking of the most hallowed precedent of all, a precedent hitherto so observed that many people have believed there was actually a law of the land forbidding the chief magistrate of this country to go outside its boundaries during his term of office.

For the first time since there has been a United States of America and the United States has had a President, an incumbent of that high office will actually leave the shore of this country. Nevertheless, although President Roosevelt's trip will occupy three weeks and will involve an ocean voyage of over 4,000 miles, the only time he will not be, technically, at lease, through being on board a government vessel, on United States soil will be when he crosses the bounds of the canal zone for the official reception at President Amador's Palace at Panama.

The President and his party, which comprises Mrs. Roosevelt, Surgeon-General Rixey of the navy and several secretaries and clerks, board the Mayflower, which, escorted by scores of yachts, steams down the Potomac and the Chesapeake to a point near Wolf Trap light in Hampton Roads, where they board the big 16,000-ton battleship Louisiana, to the accompaniment of a presidential salute of twenty-one guns.

Comfort on the Battleship.

The Louisiana, which will be escorted throughout the trip by the Washington and the Tennessee, the newest and largest of America's armored cruisers and the finest and most powerful of their kind in any navy, has been practically made over as regards her interior fittings for the comfort of the President and his party.

In Touch by Wireless.

During his trip the President will spend one day in Porto Rico and probably a week at Panama. In order to remain under the American flag as much as possible he will land at Cristobal, in the canal zone, which is United States territory under the canal treaty, instead of at Colon. He intends to cross the isthmus from terminal to terminal, to have the many engineering problems thoroughly explained to him and to personally inspect the sanitary and working conditions of the zone.

HINT FOUL PLAY IN LYNN DEATH

LYNN, Oct. 8.—At an inquest to-day into the death of Albert T. Quinton before Judge John W. Berry of the Lynn Police Court, Dr. J. G. Pinkham, medical examiner, reported that Quinton may have come to his death by a blow on the head.

Other witnesses reported seeing Quinton fall down a flight of stairs on the night of his death, and Judge Berry reserved his decision.

Quinton, who has relatives living at No. 24 Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, on the night of September 15 was found dead at the foot of some steps at Buffum and Mulberry streets.

RECEIVER FOR PARAGON PARK IS REFUSED

Judge Fessenden Denies Application of the Meller Company, a Creditor.

THE MANAGER A WITNESS

Judge Fessenden, in the Equity session of the Superior court to-day, denied the petition of Robert Miller & Company for the appointment of a receiver for the Eastern Park Construction Company, proprietors of Paragon Park.

The bill for the receiver was brought some weeks ago, Miller holding claims against the company for over $2,800 for goods and materials delivered during the past Summer. The bill set forth that the company was insolvent, that there had been gross negligence in handling the funds, and that the bondholders had been favored to the exclusion of creditors.

Attorney Hughes for the construction company said that he objected to the appointment of a receiver, and that a majority of the creditors had agreed to the recommendation that 10 cents on the dollar be accepted.

Manager Dodge Called.

Judge Fessenden told Attorney Hunter, for the Miller company, to put in his evidence, and George A. Dodge, manager of the company, was called.

Mr. Dodge said that the company had an office at No. 15 State street and that the office was maintained at the present time. They paid $58 a month rent, a bookkeeper $18 a week and a stenographer $10 a week.

After the close of the park the company had made a statement to the creditors showing liabilities of $55,000 and assets of $6,000. A committee of creditors was appointed to investigate, and its report recommended the acceptance of ten cents on the dollar.

For the purpose of book-keeping the company maintained a construction account. For this account $32,000 had been charged during the past season. He said that it had not improved the property. In explanation he said that every year money had to be spent to renovate the property, especially buildings where no shows were coming in, and the usual repairs and painting.

No Money for Interest.

Mr. Dodge admitted that there was an attachment of $700 on the property by one creditor and one other attachment, both pending at present. The plant at Nantasket was covered by a mortgage for $400,000. The interest was due on January 15, and at present there was not sufficient money to pay the interest.

The company has $150,000 in notes out at the present time. The plan of the creditors' committee was to hold out the notes and distribute $6,000 among the other creditors. Mr. Dodge declared that, acting under the advice of counsel, the office on State street had been maintained pending the issue of this case. He said that there was no need of keeping the office and that it can be closed at any time.

Wallace F. Flanders of No. 12 Central street, the second witness called, is a fire insurance agent, and placed the original insurance on the park itself. The amount was $128,000. At present there is $75,000 on the park itself, the difference having been allowed to lapse or having been cancelled. These were the only two witnesses called.

After hearing the arguments, Judge Fessenden dismissed the bill.

U. S. ORDERS NAHANT LIQUOR SALES STOPPED

A sensation in military circles was sprung to-day when the United States War Department, through its Boston headquarters, Major Edward Burr commanding, sent notice to Sylvester Brown, proprietor of the Trimountain House, Nahant, to stop the sale of intoxicating liquors or stand governmental prosecution.

Violation of the anti-canteen law passed by Congress on February 2, 1901, which forbids the sale of intoxicating liquors on premises held by the United States for military purposes, constitutes the basis for the order.

Though the Trimountain House was leased by Sylvester Brown from the U. S. Government for a term of five years, beginning April 1, 1903, the lease having nearly two years yet to run, the order will be stringently enforced. Mr. Brown has not yet decided whether to fight the order in court or not.

Major Burr, commander of the Boston headquarters, says:

"The Trimountain House is on the Bailey Hill Reservation, is governmental property on government land and subject to the War Department orders.

"Orders have come from Washington that Brown was violating the anti-canteen law, and I was commanded to stop the sale of liquor, despite his lease, or prosecute him. I have ordered him to stop."

GARDNER BETTER; TO VISIT HOT SPRINGS

Congressman Gardner, who has been confined to his country home at Hamilton for the past three weeks, owing to sickness, is showing such marked improvement that he expects in about a fortnight to be able to take a trip to Hot Springs.

The Congressman was a very sick man, and his condition was so serious that all knowledge of the doings of the campaign was kept from him.

CALL BROWN'S GREAT RUN MARVEL OF POLITICS

WON GREATEST VOTE EVER CAST IN STATE FOR DEMOCRAT FOR SECOND PLACE.

Record breaking features in connection with E. Gerry Brown's vote in his candidacy for Lieutenant-Governor on the Independence League ticket are still looming up as the revised returns come in. He swept sixteen out of the thirty-three cities in Massachusetts against his opponent, a showing that is the marvel of all students of politics.

In addition, his energetic campaigning in behalf of labor, though without funds, netted for him the greatest vote ever received by a Democratic candidate for the Lieutenant-Governorship. Brockton, his home town, gave him a handsome tribute over Draper.

John B. Moran captured an even dozen cities in the State over his opponent, Governor Curtis Guild. His pluralities in his victorious cities ranged from 13,461 in Boston down to 35 in Lynn.

Not only did E. Gerry Brown outrun his partner, John B. Moran, in the total number of votes received, but he captured four more cities than Moran. He ran 7,515 votes ahead of Moran in Boston and 20,976 ahead of Draper.

Accompanying will be found the statistics in tabulated form, showing Moran's and Brown's pluralities over their opponents in cities captured by them and showing which of the two, Moran and Brown, ran highest in every city in the Comomnwealth.

OFFENDED BY BEER "ADS" ON CAR TRANSFERS

Church Club Protests Against Breweries' Use of Trolley Slips.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—When you get a trolley transfer in Providence, you read on the back of it that "B—— Beer Is the Best for Thirst."

The church folks of the community, and some who are not church folks, have long protested against this particular grab of a trolley company for more nickels. The Men's Club of Trinity Union Methodist Episcopal Church has adopted these resolutions:

"Resolved, That the Men's Club of the Trinity Union Methodist Episcopal Church protests against the brewery advertising upon the 'transfers' now being used by the Rhode Island Company, or the advertising upon its transfers of any liquor containing alcohol.

"Resolved, That this club considers such action of the Rhode Island Company as forcing upon its patrons a form of transfer which is morally distasteful, which is offensive to temperate people and which is a temptation, especially to the young, to become users of alcoholic liquors.

"Resolved, That this club urges upon the Rhode Island Company the advisability of discontinuing this class of advertising at the earliest possible moment.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the responsible parties of the Rhode Island Company, and that a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of the club."

SISTERS SAY PUPILS' PRAYERS ANSWERED

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 8.—The sisters in charge of St. Mary's parochial school granted a half-holiday to the pupils yesterday, stating that their prayers for improvement in the health of the Rev. James F. Clark of St. James's parish, who is critically ill, had been answered and they were deserving of the holiday.

CATHOLIC MEN GIVE OVATION TO ARCHBISHOP

Mgr. O'Connell Makes Eloquent Address at Reception at Boston College.

Clean hearts, pure minds and honest consciences—men who possess these attributes, declared Archbishop William H. O'Connell in an eloquent address at the reception tendered him by the Young Men's Catholic Association, are those who will be heard from soon in this country.

The reception, which took the form of a veritable ovation, was held last evening in Boston College Hall. More than a thousand of the Catholic young men and women of this section of the country joined in the greeting. Mayor Fitzgerald occupied a seat on the platform. In the course of his address the archbishop said:

"If I have rejoiced, not for myself but for the church, at the unmistakable welcome which all conditions of men have given me, I rejoice doubly that the voice of the young came to me above the general chorus. The voice of youth is the voice of hope. And while hope is with us we shall live and progress.

"And the church needs courageous action as well as wise counsel. The church is not like the pyramids—stately, immobile, grand amid the barrenness of desert sands. She is Peter's bark—a ship—which sails from port, bearing the wealth of old havens to enrich the newest-opened harbor. Her truth is changeless, but she has, nevertheless, a new lesson for each new condition. That is why she is young, that is why the young as well as the old love her; for while the young reverence the old, they love most the young."

TREED BY BEAR FOR NEARLY 24 HOURS

TEXAS, Vt., Nov. 8.—R. E. Howard of Burlington was treed by a bear in the woods here for nearly twenty-four hours. Bruin finally climbed up to Mr. Howard, who killed the animal with an axe.

YANKEE GIRL SUES GERMAN MILLIONAIRE

Miss Marian Draughn, Actress, Says Heinrich Thyssen Promised to Wed Her.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Miss Marian Draughn, the young American actress, who last played at home in "The Education of Mr. Pipp," and who is suing rich young Heinrich Thyssen of Dusseldorf for breach of promise, told on the witness stand to-day that while she was in the United States Herr Thyssen had sent her expensive presents, and she had asked him to "send the money instead," so that she would not have to pay tariff charges on presents.

The thrift of woman, indeed, was the main point developed in the early stages of to-day's hearing.

The Thyssens are immensely wealthy. In millions the family is said to rank second only to the Krupps in all Germany. Heinrich's father is the owner of the iron works at Dusseldorf, where 9,000 men are employed.

The young multi-millionaire is at present engaged to marry a Viennese Baroness. He absolutely denies the charge made by the actress. Miss Draughn, however, insists that not only was there a promise to wed but that Heinrich Thyssen further promised to give her $3,750 annually.

Her counsel declared to-day that the couple met in London, while Miss Draughn was appearing professionally, and that, so far as Thyssen was concerned, it was apparently "love at first sight." He said the Dusseldorf man promised to marry, but the actress stipulated that on account of parental objections the marriage must be secret.

COFFEE PARTY AT ST. ANDREW'S

Classes will be held throughout the Winter on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in dressmaking, millinery, embroidery, elocution, stenography, gymnastics and bookkeeping.

AUTO LAWS TO BE ENFORCED, SAYS O'MEARA

Speed of Cars on Boston Streets "Suggest Murder and Suicide," Says Commissioner.

Police Commissioner O'Meara is to have the auto laws obeyed to the letter. In many cases the commissioner says that the laws have been violated, and the speed that some of the cars attain "suggest both murder and suicide." In a statement issued to-day Commissioner O'Meara says:

"The return of auto owners to Boston and the reopening of the theatres have made Boylston and Beacon streets especially dangerous for foot passengers."

"In Commonwealth avenue the park regulations fixing a maximum speed of eight miles an hour east of Massachusetts avenue has made the work of the police comparatively easy, and there have been so many prosecutions in the immediate past that there has been but one case in court this week, though two others are coming up Friday.

"Boylston street is such a centre for automobiling and so many cars are driven through there without occupants other than the chauffeurs that the police are forced to take the most energetic measures.

"Complaints are based on reasonbale speed, considering the conditions of traffic in the street at the time, on reckless driving. The worst time in Beacon street is just after dark, when business men returning home coast down the hill from the State House and across Charles street at a rate of speed which would suggest both murder and suicide. For such, offenders were in court Wednesday and others are to follow."

"Automobile drivers will be taught by prosecution if they will not learn by gentler means, that they cannot dominate the thoroughfares and imperilling tens of thousands of foot passengers where they injure one."

HELD ON ARSON CHARGE.

NOTED BOSTON PEOPLE HOME ON SAXONIA

Cunarder Has Disagreeable Voyage from Liverpool and Queenstown.

HAD 1,145 PASSENGERS

The Cunard line steamer Saxonia, Captain Charles, arrived in port this morning from Liverpool and Queenstown, after a most disagreeable trip, with thirty-six saloon passengers, 244 second cabin and 865 steerage.

Among the Boston people to arrive on the Saxonia was J. T. Burnett, secretary of the Boston Elevated road. Mr. Burnett has been making a study of street railways in European cities.

Boston System the Best.

He says that there is nothing across the water that will compare with the system in Boston. Other well known Boston people were Colonel W. F. Stanton and his daughter Katherine, H. T. Lesh and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lyman, Mrs. M. E. and L. Pierce, Arthur J. Richmond and family and Mrs. Van Marter, who has been visiting her daughter, Lady Cankerville, in London.

Hugh McLean, the world's champion bicycle rider, of Chelsea, returned on the Saxonia with a new list of conquests to add to his already long list of triumphs.

McLean while in Paris captured the fifty-kilometer, one hour and 100-kilometer world's championships.

In company with McLean was Louis E. Mettling of Jamaica Plain, another well-known cyclist, who reports a most successful sojourn among the European race tracks.

'LOVE NOTES' OF PERKINS, GUILD

James M. Perkins, whose charges against Exposition Commissioner Fairbank of Warren brought the case before the Grand Jury, says this in a letter of congratulation to Governor Guild:

"Dear Sir: The election indicates conclusively the hold you have on the people of the State. You have won the confidence, respect and devotion of those who vigorously opposed you."

The Governor in reply said:

"Dear Sir: It is of course gratifying to learn that it is your opinion that I have won the confidence, respect and devotion of those who vigorously opposed me. Very truly yours."

FIFTH AVENUE MILLIONAIRES "SQUATTERS"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—By a decision of Justice O'Gorman, sitting in the Supreme Court, special term, hundreds of property owners in Fifth avenue have been pronounced "squatters" and to-day hotel owners, and millionaires along the West side of the thoroughfare will be notified at once to remove stoops, porticos, areas and short yards that encroach on the city property. Corporation Counsel Ellison plans a wider Fifth avenue, and to widen the street he will incur a cost of millions of dollars to the city and many millions more to property owners.

Such costly structures as the Waldorf-Astoria, Sherry's, the Knickerbocker Trust Company building, and other places, will have to make radical changes.

The Waldorf must give up a pretty ornamental garden between the walk and the windows on the Fifth avenue side.

Sherry's must give up its Parisian cafe, with decorative plants surrounding it.

SLEW WOMAN, "MAN'S FOE," AS "A SACRIFICE"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The secret of the death of Margaret Elizabeth Gordon, member of a rich and prominent Pittsburg family, who was found strangled to death in her room at No. 15 East Second street, the "Whitechapel" of New York, last Saturday night, became fully known yesterday, when her slayer, John Wochince, a Russian baker, confessed his crime before Coroner Harburger and told in detail of the tragedy.

It displayed Wochince as a monomaniac, with one idea in his brain—that women are the foes of man. He had killed this young woman, whom he had never seen before, "as a sacrifice, as a duty," he calmly said. It was a smouldering spark of conscience that led him to confess to a fellow workman in the bakery, at No. 2091 Third avenue, where he was employed, so that Alexander Gordon, the husband of the slain young woman, might not suffer for the crime.

Had Pitiful Life Story.

Little by little, in shreds and patches, the pitiful life story of "Mrs. Gordon" came out. It revealed her as a member of a rich and socially prominent family in Pittsburg. She is said to have come from a luxurious home in East Liberty, an aristocratic suburb of Pittsburg.

Her story, of which there are still many missing links, shows that she sacrificed all for love and lost. The narrative goes back some years to the time she graduated from an exclusive Eastern college. It tells how the scion of a rich Philadelphia family fell in love with the pretty graduate and followed her to her home, of the opposition of her family to the match, and her elopment not long ago with the man of her choice; of the stern opposition of his family when the young couple went to Philadelphia and of a quarrel between the young couple and the final desertion of the man.

Then, it is said, the girl wrote to her family, only to be repulsed. She came to New York to earn money and met young Mr. Gordon, whose release from the Tombs is now expected as a result of Wochince's confession.

Short and Bull-Necked.

Wochince is short and bull necked. His arms are of great length, reaching to his knees. The hands themselves are enormous. The fingers are gnarled and the nails sharp and clawlike. His head is small and the forehead and chin retreats. Small bullet eyed looked through a great thatch of black hair that falls over them.

His mouth is large, displaying immense, irregular teeth. The nose is small and the cheek bones are prominent. His whole appearance is that of a human gorilla.

In his room over the bakery the police found many books on anarchy. He had been a member of an anarchist band in Russia, he confessed. There were also novels by French and Russian authors, detailing the infidelities of women. He had revelled in this kind of literature. The trend of what little mind Wochince possessed was plain. Without the least emotion he told of his crime. He was proud of it. He had done his duty, he said. He had wiped off the earth one of the foes of mankind.

Success in the Gulf Coast Country

Every Monday and Thursday there will appear in the columns of this paper an example of what has been done in farming in the Gulf Coast Country on the Brownsville Line. 2

$500 Realized from One Acre of Onions.

Mr. Geo. Hoffman, of Kingsville, Texas, planted early this Spring five acres in carrots. In March, he sold his carrots to Denny & Co., of Chicago, for $5 per crate. His net returns on five acres of carrots were $320 per acre. One acre planted in onions yielded more than 20,000 pounds, for which he received 2 1-2 cents a pound. Result: $500 per acre.

Mr. Hoffman is not a myth, but a real, live, up-to-date farmer; write him at Kingsville and he will tell more about his wonderful success.

Such results may seem beyond belief, but they are facts. You might do as well in the Gulf Coast Country. It has a mild climate; tender vegetables can be raised almost every month in the year. The farmer there puts his crop on the market in Winter and early Spring, when the price is highest. By irrigation he insures himself against crop failure; rivers or artesian wells give a bountiful supply of water. Two and sometimes three crops a year are raised and twenty acres there will make as much as fifty acres in other places.

Don't you think this is better than a one-crop country where your success depends on uncertain weather with irregular rainfall? Come to the Gulf Coast Country and win success as others have done.

Now the land is cheap and you can get it on easy terms. Twenty acres will cost you about $500. The cost of clearing it is about $5 an acre. The cost of water for irrigation varies. You may want an artesian well of your own; you may get water from some river; or you may get it from your neighbor. But the cost is not great and those who have tried it have netted from the first crop, a sum which has paid all expenses, and left a good surplus.

It is not only a good place to make money, but it is also a good place for a home. The sunny, mild winters are delightful and the summers are tempered by the cool breezes from the Gulf.

Take a trip down there and see for yourself—that's the best way. Every first and third Tuesday of each month, we will sell round-trip tickets to any point in the Gulf Coast Country and return, at the following rates:

From Chicago,	$25.00
From St. Louis,	20.00
From Kansas City,	20.00
From Peoria,	23.00
From St. Paul,	27.50
From Minneapolis,	27.50

These tickets will be good 30 days and they will permit you to stop over at any point.

Let me send you our books describing the wonderful crops produced in this marvelous country. Don't delay, write me to-day.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE THIRD AS A LEGAL PARTY

Over 33,000 Votes Cast for New Political Organization but Three Months Old.

The Independence League cast more than 33,000 votes in this State and stands third as a political party. This rapid growth in three months is regarded as phenomenal. The officials of the organization believe that before another year it will have reached first place in the Commonwealth.

In the city of Boston, under the Independence League designation, there were cast 8,372 votes. In the Democratic column there were only 34,083 ballots recorded. Here is the Independence League vote in some of the other cities:

Votes in Other Cities.

Cambridge, 1,082; Fall River, 1,059; Lynn, 1,391; New Bedford, 774; Quincy, 498; Salem, 735; Somerville, 874; Taunton, 576; Waltham, 458, and Worcester, 1,413.

In Chelsea there were 630 Independence League votes to 427 Democratic votes. In Mashpee there was one Independence Leaguer, one Prohibitionist and one Democrat. There were about fifty Republicans there, however.

The officers of the Independence League will at once make preparations to make it a full-fledged party by the formation of a State committee. The selection of this committee will be made in January. Other work in connection with the building up of the organization will be carried on steadily.

In the 288 towns and cities the totals for Moran were as follows:

Prohibition	24,332
Independence League	33,002
Democratic	112,732

8 CHILDREN OF LEPER IN PUBLIC SCHOOL

The State Board of Health has been called upon by officials of the town of Wareham to investigate the health of the eight children of Frank Pena, a supposed leper, who are attending the Wareham schools. Pena, who formerly resided at Harwich, is now a member of the leper colony on Penikese Island. The discovery that his children were in the Wareham schools has created something of a scare there.

Dr. J. W. Proctor of the board has taken several cultures for examination. Should any of the family be found suffering from the malady and should they be sent to Penikese, it is said that the town of Harwich, from which they recently moved, would be obliged to pay $1,000 annually for the maintenance of each member.

BOY OF EIGHT IN HIGH SCHOOL IS LINGUIST

An eight-year-old boy was to-day admitted to the classes of the Brookline High School. He is William James Sidis, and the only son of Dr. Boris Sidis, a German physician, and it is said that he talks four languages fluently, besides having wonderful knowledge of algebra, physics, mathematics and other things that the average boy finds hard work.

The young student was touted for such a wizard at books that he was admitted without the customary entrance examination. He is vouched for by Professor James of Harvard, for whom he is named.

All Big Colleges Get in Trim For Hard Game Saturday

HARVARD FEARS THE REDSKINS

Harvard's biggest game in the Stadium this season comes Saturday, when the Indians will battle with the paleface warriors of the gridiron, and it's the only big contest that local followers of the strenuous game will have unless they journey to New Haven to witness the annual conflict between the Crimson and the Blue.

It is the only game where the speculators have come out from their hiding places to ply their traffic, as there they recognize the fact that the biggest crowd of the season will be on hand, and consequently tickets will be worth while obtaining.

The Indians' decisive defeat of Pennsylvania has made them the most dangerous of opponents for the Crimson, and it is a good even money bet between the two teams for victory.

The new rules have proved of exceptional value to the Redskins, who were always strong when open play was in vogue and generally sprung their sensations in the open. Now they are at their best where the rules provide for so much fast playing, which is the natural style for the descendants of the Plains.

Fear in Harvard Camp.

That there is considerable fear in the Harvard camp is evident by the extra amount of secret play which is being indulged in at present, and there is general alarm among the students that the Indians will in their noted tricky way make all kinds of trouble for the home representatives in the big clash.

No team has become more proficient in the use of the new playing rules. The Indians caught on at the start, with the aid of expert coaching, to the fundamental benefits to be derived from the modification of the game, and in offensive tactics will certainly make some startling plays after the whistle blows. No matter what the defence Harvard has to offer, the Indians will find some means of defeating it, and that they will cross the Crimson goal line is generally accepted, considering that two teams have already done so. Whether Harvard can bring to bear a remarkable offence itself to equalize that which the Indians will show remains to be seen, but that has been the best asset the Cambridge eleven has presented.

Harvard Not at Top Notch.

Harvard will not be up to the highest point of her development when she meets the Indians because provision must be made for reaching the mark on November 24 at New Haven, yet the coaches have crowded on the work rather than see the Crimson succumb to the Carlisle team.

The interest shown by the public over the game is manifest in the scarcity of seats. According to the Harvard headquarters, all the middle section seats have been bought up and only those in the end sections are obtainable. There will be enough seating capacity to go round, it is believed, but paying premiums may become necessary when Saturday comes round.

The Indians will leave Carlisle early Friday morning, arriving here in the evening, and will probably be quartered in the city, not taking the usual preliminary practice as in past years, but going direct to Soldiers' Field for the game.

Whether this is a sign of confidence of the coaches is a basis for supposition, but it would seem so by their action in coming later than in past years.

The most conspicuous change in the Indians' lineup is in the backfield. Mt. Pleasant, the sprinter, playing a rusher's position instead of quarter, where he was stationed a year ago. He is a ten-second man on the cinder path and one of the speediest man on the field.

The most remarkable Indian name that has ever forced its way to the front on a Carlisle football squad is that of this year's left tackle, Waseuka, which, in being translated from the original Sioux, is Throws-it-up-in-the-air-and-catches-it. This cognomen by remarkable coincidence is very suggestive of the style of play brought to public notice under the new rules. Throws-it-up-in-the-air-and-catches-it happens to be a good basketball player and is one of the strongest linemen Carlisle ever had.

REDSKINS LACKING IN ENTHUSIASM OVER THE HARVARD GAME

CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 8.—While the Carlisle Indians expect to put up the fight of their lives against Harvard in Saturday's contest at Cambridge, there is every indication here that the Redskins are lacking much of the spirit and enthusiasm that carried them victoriously through the Indian-Pennsylvania game.

The practice yesterday was seemingly very hard work for all the men, and, in the opinion of the coaches, it dragged terribly. Carl S. Flanders, last year's Yale centre, who was assisting the Indian coaches as a line specialist, and in the working out of some new complicated plays the aborigines will try against Harvard and Minnesota, insisted that the Indians be awakened from their lethargy by strenuous physical exercise.

Alternate right tackle, Dubois, came back to-day from a visit to a sick cousin and may probably see the second half of the approaching Harvard game.

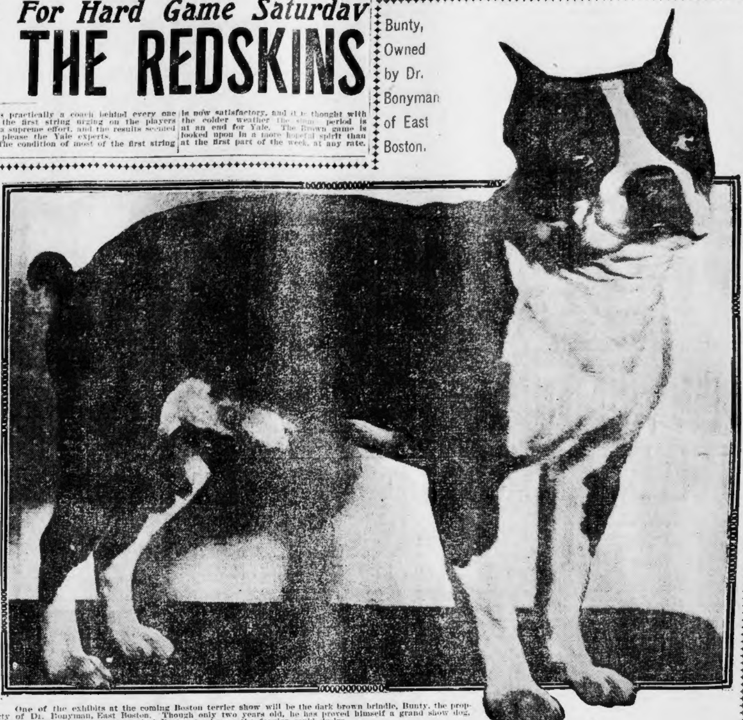
Enthusiasm at the Carlisle school is not by any means at its height, owing to the prevailing impression that the Indians have in all probability not as good a show as they thought they had. The spirited Mount Pleasant did some phenomenal place kicking yesterday, as did Archie Libby, the Indians' plucky quarterback.

The management of the Carlisle Indian School will not decide until this afternoon whether or not they will send a delegation of the Indian maidens to Boston to see the Harvard game. The chances are, however, that the girls will not go.

Yale Has Rough Scrimmage.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 8.—In a fierce and hard, rough scrimmage yesterday the varsity got away with the scrubs. There was practically a coach behind every one in the first string urging on the players to a supreme effort, and the results seemed to please the Yale experts.

The condition of most of the first string is now satisfactory, and it is thought with the colder weather the slump period is at an end for Yale. The Brown game is looked upon in a more hopeful spirit than at the first part of the week, at any rate.



Bunty, Owned by Dr. Bonyman of East Boston.

One of the exhibits at the coming Boston terrier show will be the dark brown brindle, Bunty, the property of Dr. Bonyman, East Boston. Though only two years old, he has proved himself a grand show dog, coming about as near to the typical Boston terrier as the fancier could desire.

Not only has he won a lot of prizes himself, but he comes from a family noted in the prize ring when pitted against the best of company. His markings are in every way correct.

M'LEAN, BIKE CHAMP, HOME FROM EUROPE

Fresh from his victories abroad in the bike game, Hugh McLean, the crack pace follower of Chelsea, arrived to-day on the Saxonia.

He achieved his greatest successes abroad on his last trip and comes back home recognized by all the ofreigners as the best man in the world behind the motors. He clearly won the title in the 100 kilometer race at Paris recently from a number of foreign cracks.

Another big feat was the winning of the hour race against a noted field, and also the 50 kilometer event. He was accompanied by Louis Mettling, the little Jamaica Plain flyer, who also met with muh success on the other side. Both riders will prepare for the coming six-day race in New York.

CHECKER EXHIBITION.

Herman Link will give an exhibition of his skill at checkers at Wells Memorial Institute, 987 Washington street, next Wednesday night. His opponents will be members of the checker club of that institution.

PRO STARTER IS BEST FOR THE MATINEES

Is it in the interests of amateur driving clubs to engage for their starting judges at the matiness talent outside of their organizations? With one of the members filling the exacting position is it, too, possible for the clubs to continue without internal disruptions arising through the claims from some members of partiality or incompetence?

These questions are just at present agitating both the Metropolitan and the Dorchester driving clubs. Leading members of both clubs told an AMEDICAN reporter to-day that they believed thoroughly in employing a starter outside the fold of the club's ranks.

By so doing no question can come up that friendship gave some contestant the best of the word, or that the starting judge was not fully qualified. Last Spring the "Mets" employed Frank Subert to get the horses away, and not a word of fault was found. It is very easy for the driving clubs to engage a professional for the Fall and Spring series of matinees at a very moderate sum, as these matinees are at the season when nothing is doing at the race tracks.

It is too well known that no matter how well a member does his work in the starter's stand it is only a question of time till rumblings of discord against him begin to spread about. This is very discouraging to the one trying to do his very best to all in the races.

BUNKER HILL TO MAKE ALL SPEEDWAY BUSY

A most material addition to the ranks of the matinee horses in the Dorchester Driving Club is the pacing gelding Bunker Hill, 2:13¼, which R. G. Crosby has bought of John Fitzgerald, the well-known local horseman.

In his initial essay over the Franklin Field Speedway he was pitted against Ornament, but the victory was easy, and he paced the course in 32½ seconds, which demonstrated that even the topnotchers in the club will be compelled to keep a lookout for their laurels in the future.

Bunker Hill came originally into notice about four years since, when, after a brilliant victory at Concord, N. H., he was purchased by Messrs. Fitzgerald & McManus. During his turf career there have been times when miles around 2:12 over a two-lap and ones in better than 2:10 on a mile ring were within his capability. With his speed he is well-mannered, and can step a quarter like a free-for-aller.

There is every reason to believe that just as soon as Mr. Crosby gets accustomed to the gelding he will be a strong competitor for the champion pacing honors with Rondo, Wilkesbrino, General Fiske, Checkers and Charlena. None mentioned has a point on him at any stage of the game. He is being handled by John Robie, who so many times brought Locanda, 2:02, to the wire in winning shape.

Champion Willing to Meet Battler Again;

GANS' TERMS TO NELSON

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—Joe Gans, undisputed lightweight champion of the world, capturing the honors when he defeated Battling Nelson on Labor Day, is in Cleveland this week.

Cleveland sports have been more than anxious to see the colored champion, for his fight with Frank Garrard at the Central Armory in 1898 is well remembered. The bout was stopped in the fifteenth round by the police and the bout awarded to Gans. But in the third round of that fight, it was Garrard who sent Gans to the floor, making him take the count, and also to hang to the Chicago boy's legs in getting up. That was Garrard's last good fight, for he was given an unmerciful beating before the police stopped the bout.

The colored boxer was not in Cleveland an hour before he was greeted on all sides, for the old-time sports and the new ones love a champion. In discussing the recent fight with Nelson, he told of the events leading up to the event and the foul blows, which have been published time and again in this paper.

Will Give Nelson Chance.

In discussing another fight with Nelson Gans reiterated the statement that he will give him a chance at any time Nelson is willing to let him take the winner's end of the purse, whether winning or losing.

"You know how he tried to hold me up on that fight, or his manager, Billy Nolan, did," remarked Gans. "Now I will fight him weighing in at 133 pounds, with the privilege of myself accepting 75 per cent. of the receipts and let Nelson take 25 per cent.

"The best thing and one that would make Nelson a hero before the public would be for him to come right on and say that he will fight me at the terms I mentioned above. Furthermore, I will make him a bet of $10,000 at the ringside if he is willing to. Now, is not that a fair proposition? I will go still further and say that I will give half of my proceeds to charity.

Gans Praises the Battler.

"Mr. Nelson is a fighter in every way, and I know that. He can fight. In regard to the pictures that have been shown here, they do me an injustice. In fact, they have been so doctored up to show that Nelson had all the better of the fighting. Of course, you don't see the foul blow, for it has been doctored out. Why should I make such a statement when I am getting a third interest in the pictures if it were true? I have to stand for my rights.

"If I were a white man, well, everything would be mine, but my color appears to be a hindrance. I know my place, and again I say that Nelson did foul me. I will admit that I fouled him in several of the rounds. He kicked me, and I returned the compliment. Once, when he tried to help me up when I slipped, he tried to hit me, and I did the same thing to him later in the fight. But I will also admit that I did some holding. But he started the fouling, and that blow in the forty-second round was seen by George Siler.

Not Running Away From Fight.

"When the general public hears my side of the story they are convinced that I was roughly treated. Of course, in some cities I have been hissed in the early part of the week, but when I could prove the truth of my statements I was treated in a nice manner. But don't let anyone say that I am running away from a fight with Nelson because I have signed up to fight Kid Herman. Not in the least, but I would rather fight than be on the stage. I will commence training for the bout in about three weeks, and I will leave it to Herman's manager if I did not let him name his own terms. I am not trying to hold up anyone. When he said 60 and 40 per cent. I told him I was perfectly satisfied. I hope Clevelanders will see the injustice that Nolan is forcing on me."

JOHN I. TAYLOR WILL BE HOME ON SATURDAY

Next Saturday the president of the Boston American team, John I. Taylor, is expected to reach New York, after an extended trip abroad which has lasted for several months.

The return of the head of the Hub team will bring out some developments which will be of great interest to the local fans, as everything depends on the action taken by Mr. Taylor for the future of the team.

General Taylor, the president's father, who had the direction of the team in his hands this season, will go to New York to meet his son.

As John I. Taylor has been in communication with the headquarters of the club all the season, he fully understands the situation of the team's affairs, and will be able to take some action on the remodelling of the team as soon as he arrives.

At the time that the White Sox won the world's championship Mr. Taylor was in Paris and cabled congratulations to Comiskey.

SPECULATORS HAVE MANY TICKETS FOR INDIAN GAME

The ticket mart on Washington street which is on this week for the Harvard-Indian game is flourishing to-day, and a big business is just started, according to the speculators themselves.

Out in front of Wright & Ditson's and along the curb are the dealers in the precious bits of cardboard which will admit within the Stadium Saturday, and you can't get by them if you are in quest of the same whether you only want one or a dozen. They have them to sell, and the anxiety displayed to make a sale gives evidence that the supply is ample and has not dwindled as fast as desired.

In the hands of the speculators are very few choice seats, and what is left $2 to $3 is asked. The best of the dollar seats can be procured for fifty cents premium, and there are plenty of these, but they are situated behind the goal posts in the end of the Stadium.

Section I on the east stand is about even with the goal line, and this and the section next to it have the call for $2 or seat room.

Any seat on the ten-yard line $2 is demanded, but the speculators will try to make you think they are on the thirty-six-yard line by the use of indistinct diagrams of the field.

There are about a dozen plyers of the "spec" trade on the thoroughfare and all seem well supplied with tickets. They are there from early morning till late at night and keenly size up every passer-by who appears like a possible purchaser and quickly buttonhole him.

A momentary lull occurs periodically, the cause of which is the appearance of some "copper" as the men are taking chances, not having licenses to do business in the open.

"Better buy now they will be higher by Saturday" was general expression of every speculator and "want good seats" could be heard from every one of them.

Judging from to-day's amount on hand any one will be able to get an admission card if he is willing to pay a slight premium.

There is a bunch of seats still at Wright and Ditson, and more are expected when the supply is exhausted. These are $1 seats as it is impossible for the outsider to get the $1.50 locations unless from the speculators.

Dogs and Dog Fanciers.

W. G. Williams, Worcester, has just bought the King Charles spaniel, Ashton Pharaoh, by Ch. Dresden Pharaoh; grandsire Ch. Royal Rip; great grandsire Ch. Hartford Jumbo, a combination of the best English blood.

* * *

The California dog, Ch. Edgecote Peer, was successful in his initial appearance in the show ring East by winning at the Philadelphia bull terrier show over the imported Ch. E. Biddy. It was a grand achievement after a journey across the continent.

* * *

Walter Jeffries, the English bulldog man, says the following to show it would be better for Americans buying dogs over there to avoid the middlemen and purchase direct from the owners: "A dealer once came to me with the object of purchasing one of my dogs for an American, and after we had settled on a price, he said: 'If you don't mind, I want you to give me a receipt for ——,' mentioning a sum nearly double the amount we had agreed upon. I refused to do so, and there was no sale. I am sorry to say this is not the only case I know of."

* * *

At one of the Summer shows it was noted that a man showing a collie had discarded the old, time-honored bit of liver and was "teasing" his dog with a square of chocolate. Dogs are passionately fond of all kinds of candy and sweets, and this fancier had hit upon the brilliant scheme of turning this sweet tooth to good account. The alertness of his dog was ample proof of the wisdom of his plan.

M'NEAR WILL FILL GILMORE'S CHAIR

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Hereafter the privilege of the Bay State Automobile Association can be enjoyed by the wives and women friends of the members. The club restaurant privileges have been extended to them when accompanied by a member, and it is anticipated that the results will be most satisfactory to the club and its members.

The board of directors voted to extend this courtesy to its women friends at the meeting held yesterday afternoon. The board further instructed its house committee to make further changes in the arrangements of the club house so that one of the rooms on the second floor can be used as a ladies' restaurant.

A great deal of important business was transacted at this meeting, which lasted all afternoon and was attended by all save one member of the board. The resignation of E. A. Gilmore as a director was accepted with regret, the same being made owing to the removal of Mr. Gilmore from this city. Mr. George McNear, whose work on the house committee has been particularly valuable to the club, was elected a director to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Gilmore's retirement.

The final report of the race committee on the Memorial Day races was read and accepted, the report showing a handsome balance. The same committee reported that the gymkhana sports of Saturday last netted the organization a handsome sum.

* * *

F. J. Wagner, the man who has started every Vanderbilt race and who is allied with the Motor Age, came to town yesterday with a good batch of news. "Wag" says that there need be no fear as regards the future of the Vanderbilt races. The next one will be held in this country, and that, too, on the motor highway now being planned by the big men in the game. A committee of manufacturers has asked for a conference with the committee in charge of the proposed course, and there is every reason to believe that this committee is authorized to subscribe a handsome sum for the construction of such a course as is proposed.

* * *

The new 60-horse-power Thomas car which arrived in this city on Tuesday attracted no end of attention all day yesterday. The applications for demonstrations were more numerous than the Harry Fosdick Co. could take care of in a single day. The car looks a motor vehicle in every shape and form. It seems to possess no end of power, and on the little trip taken by a party of well-known motorists early last evening showed an ability to easily surmount every one of the many steep grades encountered. It is unquestionably the best car ever turned out by the Thomas Co., which is saying considerable. Ezra Kirk, sales manager for the Thomas, is also in town looking into a few matters and meeting his friends, whose name is legion. He was yesterday successful in securing a strong agency in Portland, Me., and will spend the next few days visiting other points in New England. Ezra Kirk said: "This year's car speaks for itself. We have got the best ever, and that is shown by the way the local agents are clamoring for the privilege of handling the same."

* * *

There is one motor police, by name W. G. Davis of Mattapan, who caught a tartar on Sunday and who failed to convict his prey in the Quincy court yesterday. While travelling through Mattapan on Sunday F. W. Clarke, of the local Darracq Co., who was being followed in another machine by Albert S. Perry, saw a motor policeman swing in back of them. He signalled to Perry and the pair drove along just fast enough to show fourteen miles an hour on their speedometers. Nevertheless they were summoned into court for exceeding the speed limit, and yesterday it was contended that they were going thirty miles an hour and were racing. The defence put in their testimony, backed by the speedometer man, who testified that a test of the speedometer showed that when it pointed to 14 miles an hour it really was going 13¾ miles. As the speed limit was supposed to be 15 miles an hour in the place where they were said to be racing there was naturally a variance in the testimony. Judge Almy placed both cases on file. Hence there is joy in the Darracq camp.

MANTELL TO MEET SAWYER

Frank Mantell, the welterweight champion of Rhode Island, and Tom Sawyer, the Rockland, Me., welterweight, were matched in this city yesterday to box fifteen rounds for the championship of New England. The managers of the men met at a well known sporting rendezvous and arranged the details. Several clubs desire the match, but the managers could not decide at the time of meeting which organization they would sign up with. The matter is very likely to be settled to-day.

Mantell broke into the limelight strongly the other night by fighting Billy Yourhall to a draw, and Sawyer proved his calibre by besting Barry Connolly at Rockland, Me.

They are a pair of husky youngsters and a sensational combat should be the outcome of the meeting between them.

N. E. HEAVIES WILL CLASH

Jack Curran, the Springfield heavyweight, who knocked out Duke Ferguson of Chelsea in a round last Winter, is now under the management of Billy Crowley of Hartford, Ct. Curran is a fast young fellow, and Crowley thinks that he has a comer in him. As a test for the Springfield man, Jerry Gaines, the husky marketman of Cambridge, has been secured for a meeting at Bellows Falls, November 16.

Curran, if successful in the coming battle, will challenge Jack Johnson.

Dorothy Dix Enlarges Upon the Virtues of Cultivating a Smiling Face and a Winning Way in the Eighth of Her

Ten Commandments for Married Men

Always Meet Your Wife with the Smile That Wins

By Dorothy Dix

NO MAN SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS.

THERE'S ENCOURAGEMENT IN A CHEERFUL SMILE

THE eighth commandment of the married man is this:

Thou shalt meet thy wife with a glad sweet smile, and shalt give her at home the pleasures she seeks abroad.

The advice contained in the eighth commandment given to the man who is hunting the road to domestic happiness has been offered millions of times to millions of women, and millions of wives are faithfully and conscientiously trying to put it into operation every day of their lives.

What is sauce for the goose is likewise sauce for the gander, and I offer it here to the prayerful consideration of men.

That women have failed to make home happy, although they have sat up and grinned like chessy cats, and have done their best to give their husbands at home the pleasures of the saloons they enjoyed abroad by letting them smoke all over the house, and drink as much as they please and have fitted themselves to converse congenially with their lords and masters by laboriously memorizing the baseball score and the fighting record of the welterweight champions, is only to be explained in one way.

That is on the ground that no one individual, whether male or female, can make a successful home alone and unaided. It is too big a contract. It requires co-operation. The advice is sound as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far enough. It requires to take in the husband also, and let him do half of the smiling, and half of the work of making things comfortable, and happy, and cheery.

What Home Means

TO many men, perhaps to most men, home really means the place where they can dump down all of their troubles and worries, and exhibit the bad temper and the nerves that they have not dared expend all day upon employes who could throw up their jobs, or customers and clients who could take their patronage elsewhere. I give the average man, who is an awfully decent sort of fellow and means well, credit for not knowing that he does this and that this is his mental attitude toward his home.

None the less, that is the way he acts, and the smile that won't come off anywhere else rubs off on the average man's doorstep.

Men also live under the cherished illusion that keeping house, and nursing babies, and wrestling with the problem of how to make one dollar do the work of five, is an occupation that is full of excitement and thrills, and so light and easy that it fatigues neither the mind nor body.

Therefore, a man feels that when he comes home tired mentally and physically that his wife, having passed such a gay and pleasant day, ought to be dressed in her prettiest frock, and in her sunniest mood; ready to pet and cajole him, and spend her evening entertaining him if he wishes to talk, or sitting by in a companionable silence if he prefers, as he generally does, to read the paper, or else she should be perfectly satisfied to stay quietly at home while he goes out to enjoy himself.

How You Can Help

UNFORTUNATELY, in domestic life it is a condition and not a theory, with which we have to deal. There is no other occupation on earth so exhausting and nerve-wrecking as that of the wife and mother who must pinch, and pare, and economize, who must cook, and sweep, and sew, who must nurse, and comfort, and entertain, and who must get through all this incredible labor with one baby in her arms and another tugging at her skirt.

The day leaves this woman not gay and exuberant, but tired, and worn, and cross, pining for a little change, a little amusement, a glimpse of the bright world outside of her nursery and kitchen windows. But pining most of all to be cheered up by the man for whom she is slaving out her life.

That is why it is up to the man when he comes home to meet his wife with a glad sweet smile, and to keep his worries and troubles to himself, instead of adding them to the burden on the woman's shoulders, and that is already all that she can stagger along under. You haven't thought of it in that way, brother, but isn't it a pretty cowardly thing—a pretty mean, low-down playing of the game—to add your worries, that she can't help, to the worries that your wife has got to brood over all the next day as she sits and makes over your old trousers for Johnny, and keeps one eye on the baby, and makes excursions back and forth to the kitchen to see if the bread is rising and the soup isn't burning?

There are homes where the rattle of the husband's latch key in the door deepens the lines in the wife's face, and makes the bent shoulder take on a lower stoop in anticipation of the trouble that is coming. There are other homes where the same sound is as if you had switched on the electric light, eyes sparkle, lips curve, a little thrill of gladness runs through the very furniture at the coming of the man who brings with him the optimism, the hope, the cheery courage that braces the woman who is lucky enough to go through life by his side to meet whatever fate comes.

What Hubby Can Do

WHEN a woman is discontented at home, she goes out to seek—what? Companionship, amusement, flattery, love, and it's a solemn fact, if she can get these at home you will never hear of her hunting for them abroad.

Why should a man not think it worth while to try to entertain his wife, and read up and study up the subjects that she is interested in? One of the most pitiful things on earth is that a woman who wants to discuss Browning and Ibsen has to join a club to do it, and that she misses half of the pleasure of her pretty clothes because her husband is incapable of appreciating the fine points of an applique of baby Irish with an entredeux of val forming the central motif.

What does the discontented wife go abroad to seek? First, companionship, then appreciation, then love. Then comes the real breaking up of the home—the estrangement that makes marriage a mockery even when it does not make it an impossibility.

Yet the husband could have kept the wife at home by giving her the appreciation she craved, the praise thirsted for, the love for which she so hungered that she was ready to take it unlawfully when she could get it no other way. The divorce courts hold no record of a woman who had a husband who praised her cooking, and told her that she got younger and better looking every day, who ever started out with a lantern searching for an affinity.

Women are only too often blamed for domestic infelicity. They are only too often told that the responsibility of making a happy home rests with them. The truth is that the making of a real home, one that is a temple of peace, and light, and harmony, is a work so fine and beautiful, so noble, and so grand, that it takes both the husband and the wife to do it. Neither one can do it alone.

She Defends Her Sisters Against the Charge That They Show Great Lack of Moral Principle

By Beatrice Fairfax

IN a letter recently published, Mr. J. M. DeVaughn expresses his opinion of woman as follows:

> We find in our office great trouble in dealing with women—a great lack of moral principle in them. A woman (thank heaven there are exceptions) considers it perfectly proper to be deceitful, to use lies in place of argument, to tell a partial truth to mislead one to her advantage. Strict truthfulness, mercy and charity she knows not the meaning of.
>
> A brusque man she dislikes—she much prefers a polished villain. She dislikes men who say "Yes" or "No." She wants the kind who will let her have her way, no matter whether it is right or wrong.
>
> After many years dealing with the female sex, both in law and in business, I am of the opinion that we give them too much latitude, too much rope, too much liberty. Woman belongs in second place and should be kept there. J. M. DeVAUGHN.

Now, what do you think of that?

Let me see, what are those qualities he so gallantly places to our credit?

We are deceitful; we lie; we do not know the meaning of mercy or charity.

We like a villain and abhor a brusque man.

We dislike men who have the courage to give a decided "Yes" or "No," and only care for the man who lets us have our own way regardless of right or wrong.

Mr. DeVaughn graciously concedes that there are exceptions; that, after all, some of us are not entirely lacking in moral principle.

Poor man—he evidently has had a pretty hard time, and does not get on very well with women.

He must be the "brusque" man he mentions.

Some way or other, the term "polished villain" does not seem to suit him.

Mr. DeVaughn is absolutely mistaken if he thinks the average woman admires the man who has not the courage of his convictions, who dare not say "No" to her.

She likes the man who comn respect, who makes her unders he cannot be swayed by her whim.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued

"AND who fitted the board so evenly?"

"He did himself. He is an amateur cabinetmaker, and at one time used to make furniture. He made that table over there," she added, pointing to a small, round table standing near the corner where was the secret cavity.

"Then no workman was actually employed in fitting it up?" remarked the detective disappointedly.

"No. He did it himself, so that nobody should know. And he would not even let me know the secret of the spring."

"Which showed some distrust," remarked the detective. "He evidently possessed something there which he did not wish you to see."

"Yes. That, however, is not surprising," she remarked. "Many husbands have secrets—family affairs and such like—with which they hesitate to trouble their wives."

"Certainly," he said, glancing dubiously at me, and no doubt recollecting that gruesome object now in the doctor's pocket. "But it seems very strange that thieves should come here so boldly, attack both you and the maidservant, and go straight to that secret hiding place if there was not some very strong motive. They evidently knew there was something there—something of which they desired to obtain possession."

"But they didn't know the secret of the spring, for they pried it open."

I placed my hand in my overcoat pocket, and it came in contact with the portrait which I had succeeded in taking—the picture of the dead unknown.

Why had it been kept in such a prominent position in her room? I longed to question her, but at that moment was unable.

The mystery of the murderous attack in which the maid lost her life; the mystery of this tall, thin man who crept across the apartment; the mystery of the theft, the mystery of the human eye, were all enigmas utterly beyond solution.

I took Laking aside and obtained a promise from him not to explain the circumstances under which we met. Then to Mrs. Parham I introduced myself later as a casual passerby, who had been alarmed by the startling discovery. I did this because I intended to call again and to make the acquaintance of her husband.

Half an hour later, after all inquiry of Mrs. Parham had failed to elicit a single fact regarding any person who might have a motive for the outrage and robbery, I left the house and walked down the dark, deserted street, accompanied by the detective, who was on his way back to the station to send the curious facts to police headquarters.

"Well," I asked. "And what do you make of the affair?"

"What do I think? Why, the lady is lying. She knows who did it, but fears to tell us the truth. There was something hidden under the floor which those people intended to get, and got it. Mark me! She dare not speak, otherwise she'll ruin her own reputation. When we fathom the mystery of to-night it will be found to be a very interesting one, depend upon it."

"Then you really suspect her?" I remarked.

"Yes, I suspect her. She has some secret from her husband—and she fears that through this robbery he may learn the truth."

"You know Mr. Parham, perhaps—I mean you know something about him?"

"Well, yes," he answered, smiling curiously. "We happen to know Mr. Parham—and, if what I suspect is true, then the affair of to-night is not surprising. Wait and see. The real facts when they come to light will probably amaze you."

CHAPTER XV.

Sibyl Explains Something

THREE weeks went by—dull, dreary weeks of constant anxiety. With the assistance of Eric, to whom I had, of course, explained the tragic incident in the home of John Parham—I was ever on the alert, compelled to go down to Rutgers street at infrequent intervals in secret from Eric and pose for a few hours in the daytime as the husband of little Mrs. Morton.

Poor Tibble led a dreary life in that drab street. Mrs. Williams was kind and pleasant, pitying the young wife so constantly separated from her husband. But if my work took me away—well, she ought not to grumble, the good woman declared. There were lots of compositors out of work, she had heard, now that those linotypes were so universally adopted. And so she cheered Tibble up, and the latter sought distraction by doing fancy needlework.

Each time I visited her I ran the risk of being followed by some person in the employ of Winslow, who was, we knew, ever active in his efforts to discover her whereabouts. Her mother had raised a terrible hue and cry after a week had passed without news of her. Jack had unfortunately gone to the police and given his sister's description, as Cynthia had begun to express a fear that she had met with foul play.

As soon as I heard of this I persuaded Tibble to write a letter to her mother, assuring her that she was quite well and happy; that she was with friends, and that she would return in the course of a few days. This letter I sent to a friend in St. Louis, and it was posted from there.

Wilful Murder

Time after time I looked in wonder at the photograph of the dead unknown which I had abstracted from Mr. Parham's drawing room. And time after time I reflected whether it would be wise to suddenly confront Tibble with it and demand the truth. Sometimes I was sorry that I had not left the portrait where I had found it, for I might, when calling upon Mrs. Parham, have made casual inquiry regarding the original. Now that it was in my possession, however, I was unable to approach the subject. Undoubtedly she had missed it, and perhaps believed that in the confusion of that memorable evening it had been stolen, perhaps for value of its frame.

One night about 10 o'clock, while Eric and I sat by the fire in my chambers, my friend cast aside the newspaper which he had been reading, exclaiming:

"So the Parham affair seems to have concluded to-day. At the adjourned inquest they've returned the usual verdict—wilful murder against someone unknown. Poor girl! She was an entirely innocent victim."

"Yes," I remarked, smoking my pipe reflectively, "strange that the police haven't a scrap of a clue as to who did it."

"We have the only clue that exists," was his answer. "You saw one of the men."

"Yes, but I doubt if I'd recognize him again. It was only like a shadow passing across the room. He was tall and thin, but I was too far away to distinguish his features."

"Mrs. Parham has apparently made no statement to the police of any value, and Parham himself is still absent. He fears, I suppose, certain inquiries regarding the possession of that gruesome object which we found in the false bottom of the secret hiding place."

"I'd like to meet this man Parham," I said. "Recollect that he undoubtedly knew the man who was killed in Tennant Wood."

"Yes," remarked Eric, slowly, "it certainly seems strange that he doesn't turn up again. He may, of course, be traveling in the East, as his wife seems to think he is. She has told the police that he's often away and she frequently does not hear from him for a fortnight or three weeks. It appears that only a short time ago he remarked that he might be compelled to go to Europe on business connected with some jewels which an Indian prince has for sale. Perhaps he has gone and will write to her from Paris. That is what the police believe."

"And if he does?"

A Suspicious Man

"Well, I should think it most probable that he'll be detained and asked to return at once to New York to explain how the human eye came into his possession."

"I wish we could get sight of a photograph of Parham," I said. "It would help us so much."

"He's never had his portrait taken—objects to it, I hear. The police told me so. They always look with suspicion upon a man who objects to being photographed."

I entertained the same suspicions regarding Parham as did the police, and resolved to revisit his wife and endeavor to recover something further.

Next day, however, receiving an urgent letter from Tibble, I was compelled to assume the guise of William Morton and travel by a circuitous route to the East Side. She had the mid-day dinner of roast sirloin and vegetables ready prepared for me, cooked by herself, and looked a thoroughly capable housewife in her cheap black gown and white apron. The clothes she had bought were well fitted to the station she had assumed, and beyond a smart saying or two which now and then escaped her, she passed well as the lady's maid married to an honest, hard-working compositor.

"The only thing I can't do," she confided to me, as we sat together at the clean little dinner table, "is the washing. I send it out, and I fear that the landlady thinks me horribly extravagant. But the truth is, I don't know how to wash, and if I tried I'd at once betray my ignorance," she laughed.

I glanced at her hands, now rather red and rough by unaccustomed work, and smiled.

"Let them think what they may," I said. "You play your part far better than I ever thought you would."

What Colors Best Suit Your Beauty?

THE tint of orange is becoming to the brunette with fair complexion.

For the blonde the delicate yellow of ripe corn is beautifying.

Bright green is becoming to the pale but clear skin, but not to a high or muddy complexion.

Violet is allowable only for a face quite free from yellow tints.

Blue is remarkably becoming to fair skins, but only the darkest shades are favorable to brunettes.

Creamy white is almost universally becoming, and the introduction of cream lace makes an otherwise impossible color wearable.

Black is flattering to a blonde, but if she be not fair enough to look well in black, an admixture of her own especial color is permissible.

Usually the soft-toned grays look well with yellow or brown hair.

Browns are becoming to either blonde or brunette, so that the skin be fair enough or dark enough, and provided it is just the right shade of the hue.

NEWS OF LABOR.

President Edward Cohen of the State Branch, A. F. of L., and President Arthur M. Huddell of the Boston Central Labor Union are sending out thousands of circulars calling upon the voters of Wards 9 and 10 to defeat John J. Gartland, Jr., candidate for the Board of Aldermen, for assisting in the defeat of the Overtime Bill by being absent from the Senate on March 22. The circular reads as follows:

"Organized labor appeals to the voters of Wards 9 and 10. Labor's demand for fair legislation has been continually ignored by unscrupulous misrepresentative legislators. Therefore, the voice of the oppressed laborer has been unanimously raised with grim determination to administer a stinging rebuke to those men who have repeatedly betrayed the confidence reposed in them by their constituents.

"As a result, the following men were defeated for re-election owing to their antagonistic attitude toward labor legislation, and especially the Overtime Bill, Picketing Bill, Public Opinion Bill and the Eight-Hour Bill: John M. Grosvenor, Horton H. Hilton, Daniel W. Lane and Rodman Peabody and several others.

"It is now incumbent upon the voters of Wards 9 and 10 to administer the same punishment of defeat to John J. Gartland, Jr., as he is guilty with the men named above of the slaughter of the Overtime Bill and other similar crimes.

"We request of you, voters of Wards 9 and 10, to attend your primaries on Thursday, November 15, 1906, and then and there let your votes against him notify John J. Gartland, Jr., that you will not allow his presence to disgrace the Board of Aldermen during the year of 1907, and that you will not permit him to betray the trust you have confided in him during the past few years.

"Voters! See to it that John J. Gartland, Jr., is defeated for nomination as candidate for the Board of Aldermen."

A rally of the voters of Wards 9 and 10 will be held next Tuesday night at Old Franklin Schoolhouse, Washington street, corner of Dover, under the auspices of the State Branch, A. F. of L., and the Central Labor Union.

GARTLAND CONDEMNED.

The Boston Central Wage Earners' Club indorsed the action of the State Branch, A. F. of L., in condemning the labor record of Senator John J. Gartland, Jr., at last night's meeting, and voted to do all in its power to bring about his defeat as candidate for the Board of Aldermen. Edward Cohen, president of the State Branch, A. F. of L., read Gartland's labor record for the past six years. It showed that he had been either absent or voted against a large number of measures in the interests of labor, being absent on March 22 of this year, when the Overtime Bill was defeated.

VOTE PRESIDENT INCREASE.

Boston Pattern Makers' Association voted to increase the International president's salary to $1,500 a year at last night's meeting. Among the speakers were President Gillis and C. C. Randall of the Lynn local. B. A. Anderson and F. E. Allen were appointed to address the Lynn organization next Tuesday night. General Organizer F. E. Boardman and New England Organizer S. M. Lent speak before the Worcester local to-night.

WARD 21 CLUB MEETS.

The Wage Earners' Club of Ward 21 has indorsed James A. O'Neil for the Board of Aldermen. Permanent headquarters have been established at Warren Hall, No. 67 Warren street, Roxbury, and the next meeting will be held this evening.

LABOR NOTES.

Pipe and Organ Workers' Union indorsed President David X. Coughlan of the Typographical Union for the School Board at last night's meeting. Eight candidates were initiated and six applications received.

THE TAG THAT TELLS THE TALE

ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOM SACRIFICE TAG

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of business, as the public know, is one of sacrifice. The business here is NOT conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town, where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they get their profit DIRECTLY out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in in DUE TIME, a sacrifice tag is clapped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grade, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it, for the price marked on the tag—not a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms's "Expense percentage" basis and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices.

3 MONTHS' PIANO LESSONS FREE

When a dozen, two dozen, 50 or 100 fine Pianos, new or second-hand, get through force of circumstances, to our storage salesrooms, we put on our sacrifice expense tag, and the piano goes regardless of maker, Trust or no Trust, to the first man or woman with brains enough to know a good thing when they see it. No maker ge's a less price than the individual.

Several of below makes left, will be sold this week at reduced prices.

Gov. Guild Flatters Us

The Credit for Tuesday's Great Democratic Vote Is Due to the People, Not to This Newspaper

His Excellency Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., in a statement issued to all the newspapers after the returns on Tuesday night showed he had been elected, said:

> "This is not merely a Republican victory. . . . It is a victory over Yellow Journalism."

Inasmuch as John B. Moran and E. Gerry Brown were not supported by any known newspaper other than the BOSTON AMERICAN, we are perhaps not egotistical in assuming that Governor Guild meant to say that he regarded his election as a victory over this newspaper.

This victory would not have been won by Mr. Guild but for the fact that he had the support of certain once-prominent members of the Democratic party—men who are Democrats only when THEY are allowed to name the candidates in the interest of the corporations.

Moran and Brown were opposed by such men as Harry Nawn, who assists the Boston Elevated in keeping its dividends down to the legal limit, and by William A. Gaston, whom Nawn represents in politics.

Moran was opposed by such a man as John A. Sullivan, whose only claim to the consideration of decent people is that he does, to a certain degree, represent those State street gentlemen who would like to be in control of the Democratic party and use it for their own ends.

Wherever we find that the friends and agents of the privilege-seeking Trusts were in control of the situation we find that Moran and Brown were "knifed" by the supposed Democrats.

In order to win this "victory over Yellow Journalism" Eben S. Draper, the Czar of Hopedale, had to go down into his pocket for a vast amount of money—an amount said to have been not less than $100,000. The other Trusts and predatory corporations were notified that they must stand ready to contribute money in large sums, and THEY ANSWERED LOYALLY TO THE CALL.

Never before, in the history of Massachusetts politics, has so large a sum of money been on tap for the election of Republican machine candidates.

Nor does that state the situation. ALTHOUGH THE INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE AND THE DEMOCRATS HAD PRACTICALLY NO MONEY—LESS THAN $3,000 IN ALL—MORE MONEY WAS SPENT IN THIS CAMPAIGN THAN WAS EVER SPENT BY ALL THE CANDIDATES COMBINED IN ANY PREVIOUS CAMPAIGN IN THIS STATE.

One Republican leader, in a city less than thirty miles from Boston, received a telegram from Republican headquarters shortly before election day that read about as follows:

> "Get out the vote. Spend whatever money is necessary, but get out the vote."

Similar messages were sent broadcast, from the coast to the Berkshires. The Republican machine had workers, carriages and cash with which to get out the vote.

Mr. Draper was probably the largest single contributor to this fund, and he was the chief beneficiary. Had he received no more votes than he had last year BROWN WOULD HAVE BEEN ELECTED BY NINE THOUSAND plurality.

Last year, you will remember, the battle for the Lieutenant-Governorship was a battle of dollars. Draper and Whitney, both millionaires, contested with the only weapon they know how to handle—money. The purchasable vote was divided between them. This year Draper got it all.

Whitney, last year, spent great sums of money in his attempt to be elected. Without the expenditure of a cent beyond his travelling expenses to address rallies, this year, E. GERRY BROWN RECEIVED NINE THOUSAND VOTES MORE THAN WERE GIVEN TO WHITNEY IN 1905.

Mr. Moran received more votes than any previous Democratic candidate for Governor, with one exception, in the history of the State.

Mr. Brown received more votes for Lieutenant-Governor than any Democratic candidate for office was ever given.

Without money, without organization, opposed by every Trust servant and grafter in the Democratic party, and by every newspaper but one, Moran and Brown were given so many Republican votes that Guild won by only the normal Republican plurality of the State, and Draper won by less than 10,000.

And Mr. Guild calls it a "great victory!"

Mr. Guild flatters this newspaper exceedingly when he declares that it was a "victory over Yellow Journalism."

We appreciate his kindness in giving us all the credit for marshalling this wonderful vote, which all the money and all the organization of the Republican candidates could barely overcome. But we must respectfully and modestly reject his compliment.

The credit is due to those people in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts whose votes could not be obtained with money and who could not be intimidated—the people who do not believe in allowing such Trusts and privilege-seeking corporations as in the past have controlled the affairs of the State to continue in the mastery.

It is to be presumed that the Boston Elevated, the Coal Trust, the Ice Trust, the great steam railroads, Kidder, Peabody & Co., Lobbyist "Jake" Wardwell and his associates of the Third House, and all the rest that backed Mr. Guild and Mr. Draper for election, unite with him in calling this "a great victory over Yellow Journalism."

They all might well quote the words of Pyrrhus, a leader of ancient times, who, when his friends congratulated him upon his victory over the Romans in a battle in which he had met with great slaughter, exclaimed:

"Yes, but if we have another such a victory, we are undone."

Hilton's Defeat; Its Lesson

The People of His District Have Served Notice on the Special Interests That They Expect Their Servants to Serve THEM Instead of the Trusts

Not the least among the people's victories on election day was the overwhelming expression of popular opinion in Lowell that Senator Horton H. Hilton, having proved himself an unfaithful public servant, should be retired to private life.

Hilton was the Senator who ran away when the Overtime Bill was coming up in the Senate, last Spring, after having had sent to himself a fake telegram by the Lowell station agent for the Boston & Maine Railroad, whose lobby was working against the bill.

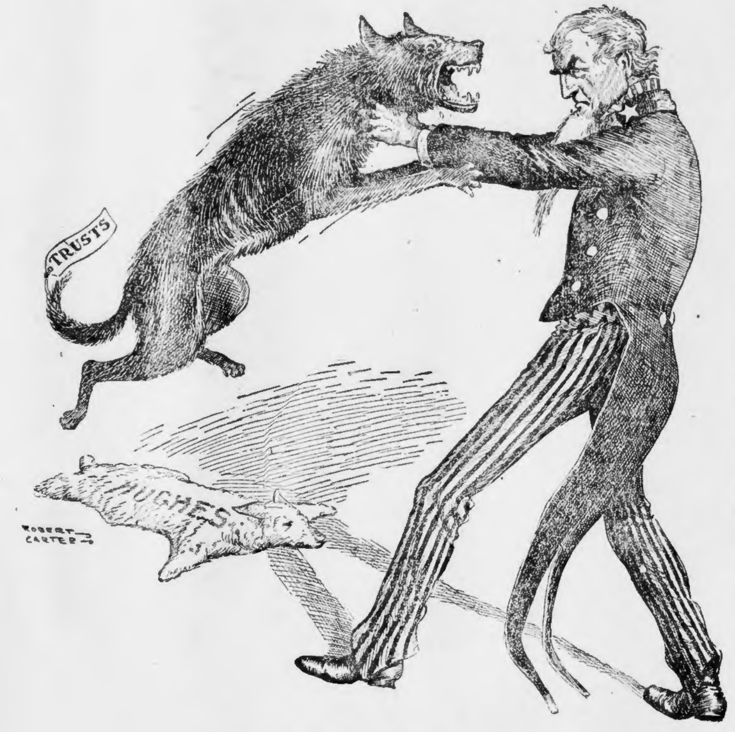
His district is overwhelmingly Republican, made so by a gerrymander in order to save Hilton from defeat. He naturally believed he could do anything and the people could not reach him. He proved a traitor to his constituents—and they found him guilty at the polls, as was to be expected.

They not only defeated him, but they snowed him under by a plurality of more than 1,100 votes.

We congratulate the people of Lowell—and also those of the Fifth Middlesex District, ANOTHER GERRYMANDERED REPUBLICAN STRONGHOLD, where Harrie Hunter, another enemy of the Overtime Bill, was defeated—on the lesson they have taught the entire State.

The gentlemen who are elected hereafter to represent the people on Beacon Hill are likely to think twice before they decide to represent merely their campaign contributors.

THE BATTLE IS STILL ON



The Sheep Skin Is Off the Wolf

A Little Novel of the East

By Wex Jones

THE soft footfalls of a doubl decker camel rang out noisily on the desert air.

On the camel was a man—a white man. At least he had once been white, but years of life under a burning sun had tanned his skin to the hue of weathered oak. Life, by the way, under a burning sun must have some advantages above life over a burning sun.

Where was this man going—this man who rode alone across the boundless desert upon a camel which, unfortunately for his comfort, was by no means as boundless as the desert. No; the camel bounded, bounced, jogged, joggled, bucked, bumped, swayed and swizzled like a motor boat in a gale.

The desert was in its grimmest mood. To the scrutiny of the mysterious wanderer upon its surface it told nothing. Each separate grain of sand seemed possessed of the same stubborn spirit. They showed no expression, they said nothing; they lay there in silent, grim, sandy expectation. What did they expect? Ah, who knows the deep depths of a grain of sand's imagination?

In the meantime the man rode on, heeding not at all. From the steady gait of the camel one would have said the rider was on his way somewhere.

Mile after mile was passed.

"Ah!" said the man.

It was the first thing he had said in 1,000 miles.

What had stirred this silent traveller to such language?

Wait! See! he alights. He examines an object on the ground.

It is a strange object to find in the middle of the Sahara.

One might expect to find such things in a city, perhaps; in a junk shop; in a bakery; even in an aquarium.

The man examines his strange discovery with great care. He evidently fears some strange, evil influence.

The object is—a barrel organ.

"Ah!" said the man, in a tone that was full of meaning. The monosyllable said more than another man could have expressed phonetically in 3 days, 14 hours and 10 minutes.

"Ah!" repeated the man insistently, as he remounted the camel with the aid of a pocket stepladder.

His tone implied that murder had been done.

Then he struck the camel a sharp blow with an empty tomato can and rode swiftly away.

Whither?

Only the desert knows.

MR. E. Z. MARK LEARNS HOW

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

1. MRS. MARK—Oh, pooh, pooh, to you. Any one could bunco you. You ought to have a child's nurse after you, that's what. Why, I could bunco you myself without half trying. I don't know but what it would be a good plan to bunco you out of all your money. Then I'd know where it was.

MR. E. Z.—Mary, you nearly make me angry. But this I will say, that if you are ever able to bunco me I'll present you with one hundred dollars.

2. MRS. MARK (later)—Oh, E. Z., dear, I forgot to tell you! I had a great tip given me to-day. Will you give me fifty dollars if I show you how to make a hundred?

MR. E. Z.—Give you fifty dollars if you show me how to make a hundred? Why, of course I will. A hundred per cent. profit is good enough for me.

3. MRS. MARK—Well, here's how. You just make one down stroke, then two circles, and there you have your hundred. E. Z., your fifty, please. I've kept my part of the bargain, and it's up to you to keep yours.

4. MRS. MARK—Thanks for the fifty, E. Z. But not yet, my dear. I want that hundred you promised me if I managed to bunco you. Come—Give up and look cheerful. Now, don't ever tell me again that you are capable of managing your own affairs.

THE CHAIN

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

MEN have outgrown the worthless creed
Which bade them deem it God's good will
That labor sweat and starve to fill
And glut the purse of idle greed.

They have outgrown the poor content
That breeds oppression. Forged by pain,
Mind links with mind in one great chain
Of protest and of argument.

And by the hand of progress hurled,
This mighty chain of human thought,
In silence and in anguish wrought,
Encompasses the pulsing world.

And he who will not form a link
Of new conditions soon to be
Ere long must stand aghast to see
Old systems toppling down the brink.

They cannot and they shall not last;
The broader impulse of the day
Will gain, and grow and sweep away
The rank injustice of the past.

The purport of the hour is vast—
The world needs justice. It demands
United hearts, united hands—
The day of charity is past.

Let no man think he can despoil
And rob his kind by trick and fraud,
And at the last make peace with God
By tossing alms to honest toil.

More labor for the selfish few;
More leisure for the burdened mass;
These things shall surely come to pass
As old conditions change to new.

They change thro' strain and strike and strife,
The worst but speeds the final best;
Work for all men—for all men rest,
And time to taste the joys of life.

Dramatic Notes

AMONG the new plays to be produced this season, "Sal the Washboard Girl" is likely to meet with most success. Sal is an industrious girl, who earns her name from her energy in disposing of the weekly wash. The wicked landlord tries to win her away with his gold from Jack, the iceman, who loves Sal "with all the devotion of an honest man's hearrrrt."

The climax is a thrilling scene in the dumbwaiter shaft. Sal shins up the rope to escape the landlord, who falls with a dull thud and impales himself upon the ice tongs. Jack jumps into the dumbwaiter and pulls himself upstairs in time to clasp Sal as she falls fainting. As they stand in the blissful flush of mutual love Sal descries a wallet upon the floor. The landlord has dropped it. It contains $150,000 in bills. Jack says, "Keep it; he forfeits his money who pursues a woman." (Cheers.)

They keep it. (Curtain.)

There is little hope this season of a musical play without words and music.

* * *

"Faust!" will be dramatized by a well-known author, who has engaged a leading song writer to compose the incidental music.

A novelty in comic opera plots is announced.

King A wants his son to marry King B's daughter.

The son goes to visit King B's court.

He meets King B's daughter and her maid.

He doesn't mistake the Princess for the maid and fall in love with her.
